

Bands 'congeal' to help radio station

By Thomas H. Conner
ENTERTAINMENT WRITER

Student radio sta. Sit Fit

This weekend was cursed.

Somehow all the big parties and concerts have fallen through or been spoiled. Some sort of panic was incited about this charity party at the Phi Kappa Psi house last night. The Flaming Lips, et. al. show was off because the auditorium caught on fire... before they even got there. Go figure. Then it was on, then it was off, then it was on...

The static, shining savior in this whole mess has been one show, one night, one last, desperate, screaming, rollicking jamboree — Congeal 3, the sequel's sequel.

Once again, five Norman bands will be grinding out original tunes for five bucks. The marathon show kicks out the jams at 9 to-night at Kelly's Main Street Grill, 214 E. Main.

Proceeds from the concert will go to OU's alternative radio committee. The group is raising money to establish an independent college radio station in Norman.

So far, the committee has raised about $2,000, said Taylor Wilken.

But much more remains to be raised in order to provide an alternative to central Oklahoma's menu of radio formats.

In that spirit, these five alternative bands will take the stage at Tall Tales (partially pictured) join with Cinder Biscuits, Tyson Meade, Soul Shaker and Slugfoozle to benefit the Norman Alternative Radio Committee.

Kelly's tonight: Tall Tales, Cinder Biscuits, Soul Shaker, Slugfoozle and Tyson Meade.

"This will be a crazy show. Look at all the talent we've got scheduled," said Tall Tales lead singer Danny Fallis.

Tyson Meade, lead singer of the Chainsaw Kittens, will be playing a solo acoustic set.

The Oklahoma Daily 12-6-71